I have a requirement to make sure that the right version of a software is installed on the lab that I am working on. Is there a way that if the software is not installed on the lab then it will not process the requests? A: One of the things I look for is the version of the operating system: If it's System 7 - make sure to check the date from the registry, because it's possible to have multiple versions installed on a single box. If it's v8.0 - check the age of the operating system, as well. If it's v9 or v10 - check the registry for the operating system version. If it's v11 or v12, check the AICC ID of the printer or scanner. If it's v14 - check the cost item tag. If it's v15 or v16 - check the aging of the device itself. If it's v20 - check the update information. If it's v21 - check the version on the router. After that, you can easily check if the printer has its own driver: If the printer is still using the HP LaserJet 4-series version 6x MFP driver, I either load in the FPD PIA, or if I think it eddd65e20
