driver . Q: Any reason for leaving the letter after the noun? I know this seems to be an easy question to answer, yet I couldn't find any instances of this usage. Usually after words like 'book' and 'mouse' I would place a noun - 'the book', 'the mouse'. Could anyone help me out? A: I know this seems to be an easy question to answer, yet I couldn't find any instances of this usage. I think it's something that is gradually creeping into the vocabulary. Here are a few examples, mostly from books and blogs online Many people were working on creating a new wiki. It looked very promising. (From Barack Obama's Wikipedia) The book is not very old, but a group of historians were immediately able to identify the historical figures depicted in it. (From The History Channel) We saw a mouse run across the floor, and it made us jump. (From the blog dog memes) I was left baffled, asking myself, “What made him say that?” (From a blog on making life interesting, etc) In Alzheimer’s Disease, The Brain Becomes Insensitive To Tiredness, Fatigue “Good bye friend, I’m so tired I think I need to sleep Tomorrow is another day But you’re not coming back again.” Those are lyrics from “Almost Cut My Hair,” a song by the 1970s alternative rock band Darkwater. But even though those words were inspired by the songwriter’s father’s untimely death, they also aptly describe the impact of Alzheimer's disease.

While the cause of Alzheimer's disease remains elusive, scientists have been able to detect changes in the brain that occur at the earliest stages of the disease.
