How to shut down American Airlines? I am a frequent flyer with American Airlines for the past 5 years. But in this month of October I got caught in the AAL hub airport on a Sunday night. Their flight that I was supposed to catch was delayed 2.5 hours. And they accepted the reservation after I made the flight with them. On Saturday the 26th I checked in and then waited for about 1.5 hours. Then I called the agent and they said that the flight was delayed further. I called back that day and they said that they are not sure what's the exact reason for the delay. After 10 days of waiting, I called them and they were not sure what the problem was or when they would fix it. On October 31 I booked a ticket with JetBlue. I used Amex Onboard. I got the email on Nov 1 and it stated that I need to go to the American Airlines counter to check out and then go to the gate. At the gate I checked out and there were no charges and I got the voucher in my email. Now my problem is that the flight that I booked with them is a Sunday night and the airport is closed that Sunday and they did not tell me that they were closed and I was never given any notice. They said it would be a problem because of the restrictions. My question is, is it legal for them to rebook me without my consent? They told me that I could be rebooked only when they are able to fix the problem. They said that this is a big ticket and that they don't want to give me a refund. This is the only American Airline that I book and I don't want to rebook all the others. Is there any way to tell them to shut their business? The only way for you to ask for the charges to be reversed or to return you to your original itinerary is in the first couple of days after the scheduled flight, when they still have full access to the reservation. If they revert you, ask to be refunded. If they do not refund you, file a consumer complaint with the FCC and the BBB. I don't know your location, but you'd probably have more luck in a smaller city. You would need to be told that the flight was indeed canceled due to weather, and that the FCC requires airlines to tell you within a

Q: Grails 2.4.4 - Less CSS Doesn't Compile Correctly I'm using Grails 2.4.4. When I compile my application, I get error messages that throw up a lot of ClassNotFound errors. I'm assuming that is because of the Less CSS so I try to compile less into CSS with the following command (I'm not using the groovy less plugin): `grails compileLess --assembly=ivy --output=css` And I get the following error: `!Error Failed to execute goal net.sourceforge.less4j:less4j:1.5:compile (default) on project hibernate-gorm-spring-boot-starter: LESS Compiler error: In the last expression of a block, a variable name 'less4j' was used for a reference that was not captured, because the variable is defined (or used) inside a closure or because the variable is from the binding. Please declare the variable before the last expression or use an operation that can be resolved using the current binding. I have tried various combinations of using --assembly with both the --output and --input options in the compileLess command but none of them seem to work. It does compile, it just results in weird errors. I'm not sure how to resolve this. A: I believe this is a problem when compiling when there is less.js in the current working directory. You can try changing the working directory for the compile to something like: cd grails-app/test/target and then running compileLess --assembly=ivy (You might need to add the ivy-cache directory to your repo. In the CLI, the --output/--assembly should allow you to specify the output location, but it will not if it is referring to the working directory. I have found that with the anilox rolls on the Corona (SGU-100) knife, moisture/drying on the media rolls is always the first thing that needs to be addressed. The problem with trying to determine if the knife is just too wet or a little too wet is that it is almost always the case that the knife is extremely wet when the media are very moist. The Procammera rolls on the other hand, I have found to be very dry and sometimes very unstable as the direction of the`
